Secret Ingredients* Film Showing and Event Held at Chapman Center July 25

BOILING SPRINGS, S.C., July 23, 2019 – On Thursday, July 25, the documentary Secret Ingredients will be screened at the Chapman Cultural Center in Spartanburg, S.C. The film will be part of an evening event which includes a hospitality hour with complimentary snacks and local natural health vendors at 5:30 p.m., film showing at 7:00 p.m., followed by a panel discussion and question/answer session with local food and health industry specialists at 8:45 p.m.

Produced by Amy Hart and Jeffrey Smith, Secret Ingredients examines processed foods, genetically modified organisms (GMOs), pesticides and herbicides, such as Roundup®, and the potential risks these pose to the world's food supply and long-term human health. The documentary incorporates true stories of people who have developed medical conditions related to GMOs and toxic chemicals, plus offers a solution for avoiding issues in the future.

Presented by Natural Awakenings Upstate, a local publication dedicated to holistic living, Secret Ingredients will be sponsored by Belue Farms Natural Foods and Belue Chiropractic Clinic. The panel discussion will feature:

C. Derrick Belue, D.C. Owner of Belue Chiropractic Clinic located at 813 N. Pine Street in Spartanburg, S.C., Dr. Derrick Belue practices chiropractic medicine as part of the healing arts which align the nervous system with the spinal column and the body. A licensed chiropractor, he is a graduate of Life University in Marietta, Ga.

Harriett Belue After more than a decade in corporate marketing, Belue opened Belue Farms Natural Market in Boiling Springs, S.C. in 2001. In addition to having served on the board of several regional food associations, she has experience in holistic medicine and co-owns Belue Farms, established by James and Betty Belue in 1955.

Sallie Hambright-Belue Belue co-owns Thicketty Mountain Farm in Cowpens, S.C. The small family farm produces sustainably grown vegetables and grass-fed beef, sold wholesale to Upstate restaurants. An associate professor for the School of Architecture at Clemson University, she also conducts research on how architecture and agriculture interact.

John Kamin Author of the book, With Liberty and Sickness for All, John chronicles his quest to learn how food toxins, GMOs and agrochemicals affect the body and how the body can be healed through food. When John's wife developed cancer, the pair used that knowledge to treat the disease naturally, and she is now cancer-free.

Alysa Lee In March 2018, Alysa and Kevin Lee launched Hub City Farmacy in Spartanburg, S.C., an organic meal delivery service and full-service restaurant. Using organic, locally sourced and non-GMO ingredients, Hub City Farmacy prepares gluten-free meals that can be adapted for special dietary needs. The Farmacy is open Thursday-Saturday.

Daniel Walker Walker owns and operates Blue Ridge Brinery, launched in 2014 and based in Anderson, S.C. Using locally grown, organic and pesticide-free vegetables, the Brinery develops probiotic- and nutrient-rich foods such as sauerkraut and kimchi. Brinery products are featured in natural stores and restaurants throughout the region.

Harriett Belue says of the film and event, "As someone who operates a natural food store, I'm always searching for the healthiest products possible and staying abreast of potential food risks.
